Our summary

GVPedia, a nonprofit research and advocacy group that counters firearm-related disinformation, wants an individual development consultant or freelancer to help it move from founder-funded support to a diversified donor base. The engagement covers building a realistic fundraising strategy, mapping potential funders such as foundations, major donors and institutional partners, supporting grant research and writing, and assisting with donor cultivation and stewardship. The consultant would also coordinate with a small part-time team and manage timelines. The work is focused on development infrastructure rather than a rebrand, since marketing and communications work is already underway. The contract runs up to one year starting in early 2027 with possible renewal, and the stated budget cap is 10,000 dollars. Proposals should be sent as a PDF or Word file by email and should describe the consultant's background, a proposed scope of work with priorities, pricing and availability, work samples, references and contact details. Questions can be sent to the listed general inbox.
