Our summary

Yakama Nation Fisheries wants to qualify firms for on-call technical and creative work supporting public education and cultural outreach about treaty history and natural resource co-management. Selected firms would be engaged through one or more contracts running 36 months, with specific deliverables assigned by task orders. Expected work includes site visits, facilitated collaborative workshops, one-on-one partner sessions, planning and concept design for an art plan, a professional publication, summary reports, fact sheets and outreach materials, data collection and monthly virtual check-ins. Payment follows a cost-reimbursement model and travel to tribal lands is expected. Responses should be a qualifications package of no more than five pages, excluding resumes and attachments, covering team structure, five-year relevant experience, resumes, work samples, a rates schedule, three to five references and a conflict of interest plan. Packages are evaluated on equally weighted criteria covering tribal experience, public relations, outreach planning, visual design and translating goals into...
